NATURE KOBE

What is Tajima Beef?

Raised by nature, handed down through generations — a pride of Japan.

The origin of Kobe Beef and Japan's most celebrated brands: a unique line of Japanese Black cattle that Hyogo Prefecture has protected for generations.

1 The ancestor of Wagyu — the "imperial family" of Japanese beef

Tajima cattle are regarded as the ancestor of Wagyu, so distinguished that they are called the imperial family of Japanese Black cattle.

2 A bloodline Hyogo alone has protected

Hyogo is the only prefecture in Japan to maintain a closed breeding programme, preserving a clearly documented bloodline.

3 The source of Kobe Beef and other famous brands

Tajima cattle are the foundation stock behind Kobe Beef, Matsusaka Beef, Omi Beef and many other celebrated brands.

What NATURE KOBE values

🌿 Moderate marbling, a long finish
Rather than excessive marbling, we value a balanced marbling and a long, lingering finish.

🥩 Deep-red lean meat, deep flavour
Fine-grained meat with azuki-red lean: the traditional Japanese ideal of beef that tastes good and makes you want more.

💛 Value that grades alone cannot measure
A5 and BMS 12 are not the only right answer. A3 and A4 each have their own appeal, and we pursue the essence of good flavour.

4 Healthy cattle raised on domestic feed

NATURE KOBE's Tajima and Kobe Beef are raised with an emphasis on feed grown in Japan, pursuing the natural health of the animal and the true flavour of the meat.

5 Truly delicious beef — not just marbling

We do not believe A5 and heavy marbling are the only mark of quality; A3 and A4 beef has a genuine deliciousness of its own.

Tasting events that tell the story behind the food.
